✠ Jesus And His ✠ Twelve Apostles

Poems by Anne Campbell

Music by Ward-Stephens

The composer, Ward-Stephens, needs no introduction. His musical settings of "Psalms", "Sacred Words" and "Words of Love and Prayer" are classed among the finest contributions to Church Music.

During his long association with churches as organist and choir-master, he observed that often the preacher used the Apostles as subject for his sermons, and that nowhere was there anything published in a musical way that the soloists or the choir could use to strengthen the tie between the sermon and the music. So in order to link the two together, he has just completed the composition of a group of twelve songs in each of which is set forth the important sayings of Jesus to His Apostles or of the Apostles to Jesus. Miss Anne Campbell, the poetess, has surrounded these sayings with beautiful poems which bring out the chief characteristic of every one of the twelve men who lived and worked so near to Jesus. Thus, in a short verse, one gets a clear picture of each man.

There are twelve songs of striking contrasts, some quiet and peaceful, some in the old classic style, some of marked simplicity, some big and dramatic, others full of pathos and all of them remarkably descriptive. Particular care has been taken with the accompaniments which may be played on either the piano or organ without losing its life on the one or sounding jerky on the other. His harmonizations are always full of lovely surprises and rich in color. Each song is a distinct masterpiece and is by far the best bit of sacred writing this composer has done.

Owing to the texts, these songs will be appropriate in churches of any denomination. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the noted divine, wrote of these songs: "This is beautiful poetry, wedded to noble music".
